SPOKANE VALLEY CITY COUNCIL MARCH 10, 2026 | MEETING RECAP

This week, the Spokane Valley City Council held a special workshop meeting to discuss the following non-action items.

#1 – Comprehensive Plan Periodic Update, Economic Development, Land Use and Natural Resources Elements

The Growth Management Act (GMA) requires that the City update the Comprehensive Plan and Development Regulations by December 2026. The purpose of the update, which is required every 10 years, is to bring cities up to date with changes to the GMA, recent case law, changes in land use and population growth. To streamline the update development process, the Council will review a portion of the draft elements of the plan over three different Council meetings. On March 10, staff reported on and Councilmembers discussed:

- Key features of the updated 20-year comprehensive plan, titled Valley 2046
- State requirements for comprehensive plan updates
- Plan development and implementation timeline
- Key themes of the following elements:
- Economic Development
- Land Use (specifically Preferred Land Use Scenario)
- Natural Resources
- State parking regulations

At future Council meetings, information will be presented on the other six Comprehensive Plan Elements, Housing, Climate and Resiliency, Public and Private Utilities, Parks, Transportation and Capital Facilities.

#2 – Spokane County Housing and Community Development Grant Applications

The City participates in the Spokane County urban consortium for Housing and Urban Development (HUD) Entitlement Funds, including (1) Community Development Block Grant (2) Home Investment Partnership Program (HOME) and Emergency Solutions Grants (ESG). HUD provides entitlement funding to Spokane County annually. Deputy Mayor Hattenburg, Councilmember Ben Wick, City Services Administrator Gloria Mantz and Housing and Homeless Coordinator Eric Robison represent Spokane Valley's interest on the committee. Staff reviewed the funding applications, deadlines, awards schedule, and current funding amounts available and presented their recommendations for the funding to be presented to the consortium. Spokane County received 16 applications for the Affordable Housing and Development funds with a total request of approximately $6.3 million.

About Spokane Valley City Council

City Council meetings occur most Tuesdays at 6 p.m. at Spokane Valley City Hall, 10210 E. Sprague Avenue, Spokane Valley, and online via Zoom. Meeting agendas and minutes are available at SpokaneValleyWA.gov/Agendas. Sitting under the stars by a crackling fire has its appeal. It's where stories are told, sing-a-longs happen, and meals are cooked over an open flame. Campfires bring family and friends together. But campfire mishaps can cause injuries. With a few safety tips, you can prevent these accidents.

SAFETY AROUND THE FIRE

- Before setting up a campfire, be sure it is permitted. Check with your local fire department.
- If campfires are permitted, they need to be at least 25 feet away from any structure and anything that can burn.
- Clear away dry leaves and sticks, overhanging low branches and shrubs.
- Avoid burning on windy, dry days. It is easier for open burning to spread out of control when it is windy and dry.
- Watch children while the fire is burning. Never let children or pets play or stand too close to the fire.
- Attend to the campfire at all times. A campfire left alone for only a few minutes can grow into a damaging fire.
- Keep a campfire small which is easier to control.
- Never use gasoline or other flammable or combustible liquids.
- Always have a hose, bucket of water, or shovel and dirt or sand nearby to put out the fire. Make sure to put it completely out before leaving the site.
- If your clothes catch fire, stop, drop, and roll. Stop, drop to the ground and cover your face with your hands. Roll over and over or back and forth until the fire is out.
- Treat a burn right away. Cool the burn with cool water for 3 to 5 minutes. Cover with a clean, dry cloth. Get medical help if needed.

ROASTING WITH CARE

If roasting marshmallows, help young children. Never shake a roasting marshmallow. It can turn into a flying, flaming ball. A heated metal scewer can cause burns.

FACT

Campfire accidents send thousands of people to emergency rooms with burn injuries every year.

"The Outdoor Insider"

It sure has been nice to have clear and sunny days throughout the region for many days. There is even more daylight with the change to daylight savings time. It's a great time of year, with springtime changing the hills to green and soon the balsam root plants will decorate them with bright yellow flowers. Fishing opportunities continue to expand as water temperatures warm.

I am always interested in how the fishing is on Moses Lake, and I had a chance to check out the action at the I-90 Bridge last week. I arrived late in the day, so I am sure I missed the usual crowds on the rip rap banks and on the bridge itself. There were still some anglers fishing along the shore, and even some just arriving when I was leaving. I was able to visit with one angler who was getting some good sized perch from the bridge. He was nice enough to pick one out of his bucket to show me. He said the perch fishing is holding up really well, and there are some very nice crappie being caught near the bridge, too. I remember that there were swarms of crappie here last year, but you had to sort through them to get some keepers. Maybe there are a lot more crappie keeper size this season, which is at least 9 inches. I will remind folks that the limit is ten on Moses Lake. While I was on the bridge a bass boat headed for the launch. Could the bass bite be early this year? I hope so! This week's photo is of an angler with a perch he caught from the bridge.

When I was out checking on the activity on the March 1st opening of several lakes in the region, I made it all the way up to the Coulee City Marina. The reason was that with the very unusual weather we've experienced in the region there could be people already looking for walleye on Banks Lake. Sure enough, there were several trucks and trailers parked here, and I saw one boat as it was just leaving the marina. You may recall that I posted the Walleye Fishing Prospects graphs from the netting surveys conducted by the Department of Fish and Wildlife on Banks Lake and Potholes Reservoir last fall. The results of this survey on Banks has some interesting aspects to it. Although the overall abundance of walleye in Banks is down just slightly from the survey done in 2022, the abundance of certain sizes of walleye was up. The number of walleye in the 16 to 20 inch class made up almost 40 percent of the population of walleye and there will be more walleye of 20 to 24 inches (which most anglers release) that are in the previous survey as well.

I was curious about how the kokanee derby came off on Lake Chelan. Many think this one is done too early in the season, but the fishing is usually good for kokanee this time of year. According to what I have been told, the fishing was very good for the derby, and everyone had a great time. Fishing starts at 6 in the morning and by 8 some of the boats were done, having taken their limit for the day. They only allow 50 boats in the derby each year. Word is that most of the fish were taken at around 50 feet. It turns out that two Leavenworth anglers took first place in this year's derby. The 20 fish that they turned in weighed a total of 8 pounds. Obviously, the kokanee aren't very big on Chelan this year, but the action is great. I wanted boaters to know that I got a message from Nate Stull, of Stully's Guide Service, saying that there is a lot of debris in the water on Chelan right now. So, better take it slow when you are driving up and down the lake looking for fish.

One of the popular lakes in the Quincy Wildlife Area doesn't offer fishing in early March. It's an irrigation fed water and the level is way down this time of year. Evergreen Reservoir is a terrific spiny ray lake, with a variety of species that attract anglers when it fills. I got word that the irrigation canals will start filling on March 18th and soon after, when the boat launches are usable it will get busy. Not as busy as some of the larger reservoirs in the region, but anglers in the know will be on Evergreen looking for the walleye, largemouth and smallmouth bass, perch, crappie and even tiger muskie. I have been fishing Evergreen for many years and have had many memorable days on the small reservoir. My wife and I had a terrific day of fishing for largemouth bass and have spent countless days catching smallmouth. Probably the most memorable was the time I hooked a tiger muskie and Eileen was able to net it. We were thrilled when we released it and still marvel at the experience even now. I will be keeping tabs on Evergreen and will let you know when the water is high enough to launch a boat.

It has been confirmed that the planned special release of 1,500 trout into Burke and Quincy lakes for the March 1st opener didn't take place, due to a mechanical issue with the truck. According to the folks at the Region 2 office in Ephrata the plant should happen this week. As I mentioned in my earlier report, anglers were disappointed at Burke and Quincy and much happier at Martha and Caliche. I also checked the lakes further up the valley. I saw a few trucks parked at the public access at the upper end of Lake Lenore and also at the very top end of the lake. I wasn't able to talk to anyone there and continued up the highway to Dry Falls Lake. I stopped at the overlook and took a shot of the fly fishers that were paddling around on the calm water. This should have been a productive day for those who made the bouncy drive into the lake which is accessed above the State Park across from Park Lake. I also watched a boat take off from the Coulee City Marina on Banks, where there were several trucks and trailers in the lot. I'd bet they were looking for pre-spawn walleye.

Blackberry Smoked Salmon

Chef Sam Lungren - Wild Foods with MeatEater

It was part collision of available foods, part childhood "science project." I was probably around 12 years old, with a pile of pink salmon on my hands, a backyard full of ripe blackberries, and a Little Chief smoker. I'd made my standard-issue brine, but on a whim decided to smoosh in a pound of juicy, dark purple berries that happened to be sitting nearby on the kitchen counter.

I was surprised by the results to say the least. After brining all night and smoking for a few hours, the normally pallid humpy flesh had turned a deep purple-bronze, almost mahogany hue. The berries added a subtle fruity sweetness to the salmon that made it difficult to stop eating.

Recently I was lucky enough to catch a healthy, 8-pound Chinook in the Snake River along the Washington-Idaho border. On my way home the next day, poking around for steelhead in the Clearwater River, I happened into a veritable orchard of blackberries along the bank. Back at the MeatEater office, the recipe turned out just as tasty as it had decades earlier.

Ingredients

- 5 lbs. salmon or trout fillets
- 3 cups blackberries or other sweet berries (huckleberries are a NW favorite)
- 1 cup brown sugar
- 1 cup salt
- 3 cups water (or enough to cover fish)

1. Fillet your fish, leaving the skin on, and cut into strips if desired. Wash any residual slime off the skin.
2. In a large bowl, dump in the berries and smoosh them up with the backside of a ladle. Whisk together the water, salt, and brown sugar. Immerse the fish in the brine, cover with plastic wrap, and store in the fridge overnight.
3. Set your smoker to low. As it heats up, remove the fish from the brine and set out in open air on a plate or sheet. Let the pieces dry until they become tacky—a slight stickiness that indicates excess moisture has left the flesh.
4. Once the fish is tacky and the smoker rolling, load it up and close the lid. Check back again in three hours. For the perfect cocktail smoked salmon texture, pull off the smoker as soon as the flesh starts to flake easily, but is still moist inside. For a harder, more preserved smoke for trail and boat snacks, give it another hour or two. Serve on your favorite cracker.

NOXIOUS WEEDS

What is a Noxious Weed? They are non-native plants that have been introduced to Spokane County through human actions. Because of their aggressive growth and lack of natural enemies, these species can be destructive, competitive, and difficult to control.

MUSK THISTLE

MUSK THISTLE

(CARDUUS NUTANS)

This biennial with a rossette grows 4ft in diameter and mature plants can reach 7ft tall. Waxy leaves are dark green with sharp spines. Upper stems are bare and lower stems are spiny and winged. Pink to purple flowers droop at maturity. Taproot; reproduces by seed. One plant can produce 1000 seeds that remain viable for 10 years. Digging can be successful. Cut the root several inches below the soil. Grazing is not an effective control. Spray in the rosette stage.

How to Brine Wild Game

Danielle Prewett - MeatEater

Ingredients for a Classic Brine

- 1 cup kosher salt
- 1 cup sugar
- 1 gallon of water
- 2 tbsp. peppercorns
- 4–6 bay leaves
- 4–6 sprigs of fresh herbs

Ingredients for Garlic & Herb Salt

- 1/2 cup kosher salt
- 2 tbsp of mixed fresh herbs such as rosemary, thyme, parsley, or sage
- 2 cloves of garlic, minced
- 1/2 lemon, zested
- 1 tbsp. fresh cracked pepper

The most common complaint I hear about wild game is that it's tough and dry; a symptom often the result of overcooking. The best way to counterbalance this issue is to start brining your meat. Salt can dramatically enhance juiciness, and in my opinion, is the most essential ingredient in your pantry.

Juices squeeze out of meat as it cooks. The higher the heat, the more you lose. Since wild game is usually very lean, it's detrimental to overcook because there's no fat to make up for the excessive moisture loss. The easiest way to avoid this undesirable situation is to utilize the power of salt.

Salt can react with meat in two very different ways. If you apply a large amount for an extended period, it will draw all the moisture out. We refer to this process as curing, and it aids in preservation. A brine is salt dissolved in water with various herbs and spices in which you submerge meat or inject into meat. It has the opposite effect and increases the amount of moisture in the muscle tissue.

The salt in a brine denatures and relaxes protein structures. This allows the muscle tissue to absorb water from the wet brine. In other words, it helps meat hold more water, which counterbalances moisture loss when heated. I like to think of it as insurance for overcooking. In addition, it tenderizes meat and enhances the natural flavors.

There are two types of brines, wet and dry. A classic, wet brine is the one you are probably most familiar with from preparing Thanksgiving turkeys.

A dry brine is a mixture of salt and other spices without the liquids. In layman's terms, it's a dry rub applied to meat.

While technically a dry brine and a cure are the same thing, the main difference is the purpose. Unlike curing, a dry brine uses only enough salt to lightly cover the meat, not encrust it, for one to three days without having to rinse. The primary goal is to infuse foods with moisture and flavor.

Both types of brines are beneficial. A wet brine is perfect for cooking skinless birds or hefty cuts of meat before smoking. A common solution is 3 to 6% salt. My go-to ratio is a quarter of a cup of kosher salt for every four cups of water. You can include sugar to counterbalance the salt and add peppercorns, garlic, or herbs for flavor.

Remember that the longer you brine, the saltier the meat will be. Small birds or game may only need 8 to 12 hours, while turkeys or whole hams benefit from 24 to 48 hours in the refrigerator. Always rinse the meat with cold water before cooking to remove excess salt.

When it comes to cooking plucked birds, it's easier to achieve crispy skin if you go with a dry brine. The added water from a wet brine pumps liquid into the skin, which can make it rubbery if not thoroughly dried out before cooking. The dry-brine method is also my trick for making the perfect backstrap steak.

Below are two recipes; one is a classic wet brine to use for almost any type of wild game that you plan to braise, roast, or smoke. It is perfect for skinless birds, geese, rabbits, squirrels, bone-in hams, or shoulders from deer or hogs.

The garlic and herb salt is a homemade rub that I frequently use for plucked gamebirds. It's excellent on pheasant, chukar, quail, and partridge. In fact, I use this rub to season my turkey every Thanksgiving instead of a traditional wet brine. It's also a smart way to season potatoes and mushrooms.

Special Equipment Needed:

Pot, whisk, large non-reactive container

Preparation:

1. Combine all of the ingredients in a large pot. Bring to a boil and stir to dissolve the salt. Remove from heat and let the mixture cool. You can add a little ice to speed up the process.
2. Once completely cool, (DO NOT add while warm) pour the brine over the meat in a large, non-reactive bowl. Cover and transfer to the refrigerator for 8 to 48 hours depending on weight of meat.
3. Before cooking, rinse the meat with cool water.
4. Garlic and Herb Salt
5. Mince the herbs and garlic as finely as you can. Add to a bowl with the kosher salt, cracked pepper, and lemon zest. Mix well and spread the salt across a sheet tray in a thin layer. Allow to dry out overnight and store in an airtight container. For faster drying time you can place inside a dehydrator on the lowest setting.
6. This recipe makes roughly half a cup. When ready to use, season gamebirds over and under the skin with only as much salt as needed to lightly cover. You don't want to make it so salty that it needs rinsing. Let the seasoned meat rest in the refrigerator for 24 to 48 hours uncovered. Pat the skin very dry before cooking.

The Health Benefits of Being in Nature

Nature has a lot to offer, and the benefits of spending more time outdoors may be even more significant than people recognize.

Nature enthusiasts are known to say that spending time in the great outdoors has a positive effect on their mental and physical well-being. Such an outlook is more than mere speculation, as it turns out spending time in nature provides a host of health benefits that might surprise even the most devoted outdoors enthusiasts.

Nature and Cognitive Health

A 2010 study published in the American Journal of Alzheimer's Disease & Other Dementias found that engaged persons with dementia in horticultural therapy-based (HT-based) programming solicited higher rates of participation than traditional activities (TA) programming. In addition, a separate 2013 study in the journal Dementia found that exposure to a therapeutic garden had a positive impact on quality of life for people with dementia. And it's not just dementia patients who can experience the cognitive benefits of time spent in nature, as the Hagley Museum and Library reports that numerous studies have found exposure to nature improves cognitive function.

Nature and Vitamin D

The potential health benefits of vitamin D are increasingly drawing the attention of medical researchers, and for good reason. According to the Harvard Medical School, recent research has suggested that vitamin D may offer added protection against conditions such as osteoporosis, cancer, heart attack, stroke, and depression. Exposure to sunshine can help the body generate vitamin D, thus providing further reason to spend time in nature.

Nature and Overall Well-being

Given the aforementioned health benefits related to spending time in nature, it's easy for even non-scientists to conclude that being outdoors has a profound impact on overall well-being. But non-scientists can rest assured that recent research has confirmed such conclusions. A 2019 study published in the journal Scientific Reports found that individuals who spent at least 120 minutes a week in nature were significantly more likely to report good health and psychological well-being than those who spent less time outdoors. Though the authors of the study cautioned that the exposure-response relationship was under-researched, and therefore likely needed to be studied more extensively, in the meantime individuals, after a consultation with their physicians and confirmation that it's safe to get out more often, can aspire to spend at least 120 minutes in nature each week. The results may speak for themselves.

Real Estate Trends & Advice

WHEN WEATHER BECOMES THE DECIDING FACTOR

Often, out-of-area buyers view property only during seasons of the year when there are no adverse weather conditions. Knowing how weather might affect a certain property or certain types of structures could be a vital deciding factor. Since there are many microclimates in our region, a great deal of research can be done and information gathered before making a decision to purchase.

In my area, which is an extreme snow belt, many new homeowners from warmer regions have come and gone, usually lasting only one winter before deciding that it just isn't for them.

If you have the fortitude to handle areas that accumulate such high snow levels, then care should be taken to look for proper construction methods that can not only physically handle snow loads and other weather-related issues but also include styles that lessen the impact when conditions are adverse, such as covered porches and metal roofs that shed snow away from doors and driveways.

Manufactured homes typically have a sticker inside the home (often in a kitchen cabinet or electrical panel) that indicates the insulation factor, along with the engineered roof load and whether it is sufficient for the area in which you live.

How is the road getting in and out? It may be fine now, but just wait until February or March! Does the road have steep grades, shaded areas, or narrow passages? Who maintains the road? Is there a written road maintenance agreement? Is there flooding in the spring, and is the runoff properly ditched?

Be sure to look in the pump house. Is it properly insulated? Is there a heat source to keep it from freezing? Too many times, a new owner has experienced frozen pipes because they did not know to turn the heat on in the pump house during that first winter.

Those beautiful trees and green shrubs near the home you loved so much when you looked at it in the spring—are they too close to the home? If a tree falls in a windstorm, is it close enough to damage the home? Are the trees and shrubs far enough away to make your home defensible against ever-increasing wildfires?

When looking for your next home in the country, choose a local real estate expert who is aware of the factors involved in owning rural properties in all seasons of the year—not just in the summertime when most buyers look.

'FREEDOM 250 GRAND PRIX' UNVEILS HISTORIC RACETRACK DESIGN

INDYCAR to Host First-ever Street Race on National Mall, Aug. 22-23

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Monday, March 9, 2026) – Charting the course of racing history, officials today unveiled the unique racetrack design and layout for this summer's Freedom 250 Grand Prix of Washington, D.C., featuring the cars and stars of the NTT INDYCAR SERIES.

Set for Aug. 22-23, 2026, the Freedom 250 Grand Prix will mark the first-ever auto race held on the National Mall and the historic city streets of Washington D.C., to celebrate the 250th anniversary of the signing of the Declaration of Independence. The landmark weekend will be free and open to the public, offering unprecedented access to North America's premier open-wheel series framed by America's most iconic symbols of democracy, freedom and unity.

The Freedom 250 Grand Prix street circuit will feature a 1.7mile, seven turn layout, blending the highspeed demands of INDYCAR racing with the historic character and stunning visuals of the nation's capital. The racing circuit will wind around the National Mall, incorporating some of America's most historic and iconic landmarks.

Designed with fan accessibility, breathtaking views and safety at its core, the Freedom 250 Grand Prix street circuit will feature the high-powered open-wheel cars of the NTT INDYCAR SERIES racing on a sweeping .4-mile frontstretch along Pennsylvania Avenue, framed by the Washington Monument and the U.S. Capitol. The pit lane area of the track will be adjacent to the track, on Pennsylvania Avenue, between Turns 1 and 2 on the circuit design. The INDYCAR field will also race by the Smithsonian National Air and Space Museum, the National Gallery of Art and the National Archives on the challenging and picturesque course layout.

"This circuit is unlike any other street race we've seen," said twotime NTT INDYCAR SERIES champion and back-to-back Indianapolis 500 winner Josef Newgarden. "You've got a highspeed section down Pennsylvania Avenue that will reward commitment and precision, mixed with technical corners around 9th Street that will demand respect."

The Freedom 250 Grand Prix was formalized through an Executive Order signed earlier this year by President Donald J. Trump entitled "Celebrating American Greatness with American Motor Racing."

The first ever street race around the National Mall enjoys key support from Chief of Protocol of the United States, Ambassador Monica Crowley, U.S. Transportation Secretary Sean Duffy, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Doug Burgum, and Washington D.C. Mayor Muriel Bowser.

GATORNATIONALS KICK OFF NHRA'S 75TH SEASON

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (March 8, 2026) – Ocala's Josh Hart won in his debut with John Force Racing on Sunday at Gainesville Raceway, taking down reigning Top Fuel world champion Doug Kalitta in the final round of the Amalie Motor Oil NHRA Gatornationals.

Chad Green (Funny Car), Matt Hartford (Pro Stock) and Richard Gadson (Pro Stock Motorcycle) also won in front of a capacity crowd at the first of 20 races during the 2026 NHRA Mission Foods Drag Racing Series season. It also marks the start of NHRA's 75th anniversary season.

Hart, who set the track speed record on Friday, went 3.733-seconds at 337.83 mph in his 12,000-horsepower Burnyzz/Speedmaster dragster to knock off Kalitta, who slowed to a 3.877 at 319.60. It marks the third career win for Hart and first in nearly five years.

"I'm so grateful for everybody," Hart said. "John Force, thank you for picking me."

In Funny Car, Green continued his dominant performance at Gainesville Raceway, making it back-to-back victories at the Amalie Motor Oil NHRA Gatornationals thanks to a run of 3.959 at 329.91 in his 12,000-horsepower Bond-Coat, Inc. Ford Mustang against Alexis DeJoria in the final round.

Pro Stock's Matt Hartford had his own winless streak snapped on Sunday as well, picking up his first victory since 2023 by going 6.530 at 210.41 in his Total Seal Chevrolet Camaro to hold off six-time world champion Greg Anderson.

The NHRA Mission Foods Drag Racing Series returns to action March 20-22 with the FMP NHRA Arizona Nationals presented by NGK Spark Plugs at Firebird Motorsports Park in Phoenix.
